

CITIZENSHIP CLASS IN HIGH SCHOOL IS PROUD OF RECORD

The citizenship class of the Jefferson Union high school under the direction of Mrs. Josie S. Frary is in a flourishing condition. Last Tuesday evening there was an attendance of twenty-six regular pupils, who roundly cheered the appearance of two of their members, Bartolmei Ratto and Emidio Gonella, who entered the classroom proudly wearing the small American flags that had been pinned upon their breasts in Superior court room at Redwood City that day, when they successfully passed the federal examination and were granted naturalization papers entitling them to full citizenship in the United States of America.

In this class at present the following countries are represented: England, Austria, Russia, Germany, Italy, Sweden, Greece, Spain, Brazil and Mexico. Many of the members are well educated in their native countries, professionally trained in many arts and trades. Others have had poor educational advantages in the old country, and until the recent advancement of adult educational facilities none at all in this country. They are awakening to the advantages of the educated citizen over the uneducated foreigner in this country and it is safe to say a more earnest group of men and women, or one more deserving of all possible encouragement, cannot be found in any community.

This class turns out several full fledged citizens every month, besides giving a thorough course in reading, writing and speaking English.

COMPANY 3 MEMBERS HOLD STAG DINNER

Last Saturday evening the members of Company No. 3, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, held a stag dinner at their fire house on Westlake avenue, to celebrate their sixteenth anniversary.

A six course dinner was prepared by Mr. Podesta, of St. Helena, who is very well known for his wonderful cooking.

Through the kindness of C. Heller, who installed his radio in the fire house for the evening, music was enjoyed throughout the evening.

The members present were: J. Kennedy, A. J. Green, J. Perrata, C. Heller, Ed. Ford, T. Wickersham, P. Selmi, A. Selmi, M. Johnson, H. Hutchins, J. Soers, F. Schmidt, M. Herscovitz.

YOUNG COUPLE UNITED AT PRETTY HOME WEDDING

A very pretty wedding was solemnized last Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. White, 220 Irvington street, Daly City. Their youngest son, George Fredrick, was married to Miss Lillian Charlotte Ahern. Both of the young folks are resident of this city.

The bride was attired in a handsome gown of peach georgette and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her matron of honor was Mrs. G. Grantham, of Yosemite Valley, sister of the groom. His brother Sidney acted as best man. The Rev. D. Willis, of Ocean Avenue Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony. Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served to relatives and friends of the family. The evening was spent in dancing. The bride and groom received many beautiful gifts. They will make their home in Daly City.

The guests present were: Mrs. Peterson, aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Krause, Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce and baby, Mr. and Mrs. Carey, Mr. and Mrs. R. Pelletier, Mrs. F. Martin, Mr. J. Casino, Mr. R. Williams, Miss F. McDonald, Mr. J. Krogman, Mr. and Mrs. A. White and baby, Mr. and Mrs. G. Grantham and baby, Mr. Sidney White, Jr.

SHOWER GIVEN IN HONOR OF MRS. MITCHELL FARMER

Mrs. Mitchell Farmer, of 5998 Mission street, was the guest of honor at a shower given her by her cousins, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. G. Rossi, of 1412 Fourteenth avenue. The table was attractively decorated in pink and blue, and pretty favors suitable for the occasion. A dainty luncheon was served. Mrs. Farmer was the recipient of many dainty and pretty gifts.

The guests were: Misses Mary Rossi, Elsie Rossi, Josephine Rossi, Katie Bergallo, Beatrice Rossi, Evelyn Barbieri, Mesdames J. Ferrano, S. Barbieri, Edith Bianchi, Chas. Rodenberger, G. Rossi, Al Bandetini, L. Boetto, Fitzgerald.

REAPPRAISAL PLAN EXPLAINED TO LIONS

U. S. Ackles, of the Ackles Reappraisal organization, and T. C. Rice, county recorder of San Mateo county, were guests of the Lions Club at its dinner meeting last Monday.

Mr. Ackles explained the work which has been accomplished by his organization in a number of cities, including San Francisco, and which is now under way in Alameda county. The reappraisal of lands and buildings in Alameda county is expected to prove of great benefit in equalizing taxes and placing the burden of taxing where it properly belongs and on an equitable basis for all taxpayers.

County Recorder Rice discussed questions of interest to the members of the Lions Club, his address being warmly applauded by the interested members.

It was announced that progress had been made in the movement to aid the Boy Scouts of the district at the recent meeting of delegates from different organizations in Daly City, and that another meeting would be held in the near future, when it is hoped some definite plan will be adopted to aid the Scout movement.

FAVORS WIDENING OF SCHOOL STREET

At the short and snappy meeting of the City Council last Monday evening, Councilman Sundermann presided in the absence of Mayor H. H. Smith.

A communication from the Veterans' Welfare Board, asking the city to exempt certain property in Daly City belonging to their members, was referred to the city attorney for advice.

The city attorney reported on the alley between Alexander and Frankfort streets, and the city attorney was instructed to draft an ordinance to prevent parking on same, and control the travel so as to enter from Templeton avenue only, this making a one way street.

The police department, under Chief Doyle, was complimented by the Council and several firemen for their efficient service, both at fires and answering the many complaints that arise each day. One complaint was from a neighborhood where a store is being erected in a restricted district. This matter was cleared up when it was pointed out that most all those complaining about this condition had signed a petition to the City Council for the granting of this privilege some eight months before. There being no objections at that time, the Council granted the same.

Mr. Henry Edwards, a large property owner in our city and along School street, addressed the board on the widening of School street. After meeting with the street committee, Mr. Edwards expressed a desire to make that street eight or ten feet wider, that it may be better able to handle the traffic. After complimenting Daly City on the wonderful growth and city management, Mr. Edwards promised to see all interested on that street and learn the sentiment in general on this improvement.

Mr. Gowland, of the Vista Grande district, asked about a petition being circulated in his section, asking the residents to pay $1 each month for special police protection. After it was explained by the chairman that this move is not sanctioned by the Council or police department, as our city now has four uniformed policemen, which is ample to protect our property without outside assistance or additional expense, Mr. Gowland stated that he was well satisfied with the service of the department, and urged the Council to deny any request for outside interference to our well organized police department.

DEATH OF PETER NELSON

The friends of Peter N. Nelson were sorry to hear of his passing away suddenly at his home, 374 Templeton avenue, on Tuesday, November 22. He was the dearly beloved husband of Mary Nelson and loving father of Mrs. Louise Christen, Mrs. Eva Getchell and Nicholas R. Magunsen. The funeral was held Friday at 9:15 a. m., from United to St. Maximus church, where a requiem high mass was held for the repose of his soul. Interment was at Holy Cross cemetery.

TENDERED BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. C. A. McColl, 27 Gambetta street, was given a birthday party on November 16, by her friends in the city, and received some beautiful gifts. Those present were Mrs. Tillie Kiefer, Mrs. Weisheimer, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Yalon, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Saunders, Mrs. Finch, Mrs. Gerber, Mrs. McCarthy.

OCEAN SHORE TITLE UPHELD IN DECISION BY COURT OF APPEAL

Right to title and ownership of the old right-of-way of the Ocean Shore Railway Company by the corporation was confirmed last Wednesday by a decision handed down by the State Court of Appeals. The ruling reverses a decision handed down by the Superior Court of San Mateo county in 1923, which ruled that certain portions of the right-of-way reverted to the Spring Valley Water Company and the Lake Merced Golf and Country Club when the railroad tore up its tracks and abandoned the line in 1920.

The Court of Appeals decided that the Ocean Shore had paid $1,200 an acre for this land and was entitled to retain it. It denied that the act of tearing up its tracks constituted a forfeiture of the property and declared that its continuous negotiations with the California Highway Commission and others concerning crossings showed that the corporation considered this property as an asset.

LADIES OF COMPANY NO. 4 ENTERTAIN HUSBANDS

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Company No. 4, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, gave a party at the fire house on Peoria street last Saturday evening, having their husbands, who are members of Company No. 4, as their guests.

The evening was spent in dancing and everyone was having a good time when, at five minutes to eleven, the siren sounded and the members had to leave to answer the alarm. Upon returning, after having been away about two hours, they found a tempting dinner waiting for them that the ladies had prepared during their absence.

Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. A. Fonseca, Mr. and Mrs. A. Chesney, Mr. and Mrs. J. Viotti, Mr. and Mrs. E. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. R. Poppiano, Mr. and Mrs. A. Vireno, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Augustin, Mr. and Mrs. J. McGuinn, Mr. and Mrs. J. Doyle, Mrs. Barney Hilton, Mrs. E. Oliotti, Ernest Cuneo, Jeff Lee, Henry Rolff.

ENTERTAINS HIS FRIENDS ON EIGHTH BIRTHDAY

Milton Oliotti was guest of honor at a party given at the home of his mother, Mrs. E. Oliotti, of 430 Winchester street, on Saturday afternoon of last week, to celebrate his eighth birthday. After having lots of fun playing games, the little folks were invited into the dining room, where a table prettily decorated in yellow and well laden with good things to eat awaited them. The birthday cake, with its eight candles, was of course the center of attraction.

Milton's little friends that came to wish him a happy birthday were: Rudolph Fellman, Virginia Fellman, Raymond Fellman, Phyllis Johnson, Peter Balladone, Millicent Johnson, James Cloney, Frances Olsen, Bobbie Cloney, Edith Oliotti.

HOUSEWARMING PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. McColl were given a house warming on November 19 by friends and Mrs. McColl's lodge members. Mrs. McColl was the president for two years of the Ladies of the G. A. R., Seven Pine Circle, No. 3. The members of her lodge presented her with a beautiful mirror for her lovely home, which is located at 27 Gambetta street. A buffet supper was served at midnight. All the guests enjoyed a wonderful evening and wished Mr. and Mrs. McColl all the good luck and prosperity in their new home.

SUFFERS BROKEN ANKLE

Clarence Johnson, local painter, is traveling around on crutches these days, the result of an accident which occurred while he was at work. A ladder slipped and caused him to fall a distance of fifteen feet, a broken ankle and severe bruises being the result of the fall. Mr. Johnson is of the opinion that he escaped rather lucky at that, and hopes to be able to discard his crutches within a couple of weeks.

PASSING OF HILDUR NELSON

The many friends of Hildur K. Nelson were sorry to hear of her passing away on Tuesday, November 22, after a lingering illness. She was the idolized daughter of Julius and the late Alma Nelson and loving sister of Anna and Dorothy Nelson and Mrs. Dollie Dahlstrom. The funeral was held on Saturday at 2:30 p. m., from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., and interment was in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

SCOTTISH CONCERT AT SCHOOL AUDITORIUM DRAWS LARGE CROWD

The Scottish concert which was held last Friday night at the Jefferson Union high school auditorium was reported by those who attended to have been one of the most interesting and entertaining events ever held in Daly City.

Mr. James Ferguson, principal of the high school, was chairman of the evening, and the talent, in excellent condition, had a very appreciative audience, every number being well received. The people of Daly City were very fortunate in having such high class talent, and the songs, music and dancing was very much enjoyed by all present.

The Caledonian Club pipe band gave a wonderful display. Then Miss Florence Vinci, Scottish dancer, added laurels to her crown with her neat steps. Mr. Caldon gave a reading by Burns in plain Scottish dialect, and the songs and duets were most beautifully rendered. Unfortunately Mr. Skinner, who was to sing and act Harry Lauder, was unable to come, having eaten too much turkey the day before, but nevertheless the program was a lengthy one and one that will not soon be forgotten by the audience.

Those who took part were Mrs. Clarice Olson, Mrs. Gowland, Mrs. Jean McCurdy, Mrs. T. R. Bennett, Miss Florence Vinci, Mr. Caldon, Mr. David Will, Mr. Andrew Robertson, Mr. Hugh Cullen and the Pipe Band, under the leadership of Pipe Major George Urquhart. The pipers were George McIntyre, James R. Bennett, John Brown, Alexander Cameron, James Donnell, Hugh Cullen, Robert Ewen. Large drum, Robert Scrivner. Small drums, James Wicklow, John Keen, Duncan McDonald. Dancers, Miss Florence Vinci, Hugh Cullen. The singers were very ably accompanied by Mrs. Andrew Robertson and Miss Daisy Gowland, our local teacher of music.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Bennett are to be congratulated upon being able to secure such a wonderful program, and the M. E. church gets the benefit, which was a great success and surpassed the one they gave a few years ago in the City Hall.

GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The theme for Sabbath evening at 8 o'clock at Grace Presbyterian church will be: "Is It Worth While to Know; or Is Ignorance Bliss, As It Is Said to Be?"

Come with us and we will do thee good, as the man of God said many years ago.

Life is tremendously sacred and needs to be guarded. A man's wife hides his faults, but that gives no reason for always keeping her busy at the job.

Friendship with the church will enrich your home. There never will be an illiterate people where there is an open Bible. There is only one way for the true church to work and preach and live, and that is God's way.

The Sunday school is now getting ready for the Christmas festival.

The C. E. will hold its regular meeting on Sunday evening at 7, with Howard Roof as leader, and we urge all to come and help make the program helpful.

The church rejoices that Mrs. McNair is so far recovered as to be brought to her home on Saturday, November 26, and we hope she may soon be strong again.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Gatchell, of Centerville, were guests at the manse last Sabbath afternoon.

A general of the war said: "We will fight it out on this line if it takes all summer; and we expect to fight for righteousness on Bible lines until life closes."

Yours to serve,

CHAS. H. GATCHELL, Minister.

NEW DRUG STORE OPENS

A new drug store will open its doors to the people of Daly City on Saturday morning—the Edwards Drug Store, located at 6272 Mission street. This new store will be owned and operated by Mr. G. Edwards, who has had considerable experience in the drug business, and he promises that the very best in the line of drugs will be found at this new store. In the course of a conversation with Mr. Edwards the other day, he announced that he had traveled all over the country looking for a suitable location, and finally decided to locate in Daly City and build up with this fast growing community, as he is very optimistic as to the future of Daly City. The Edwards Drug Store is centrally located on the top of the hill.

ALAMEDANS PLEDGE AID FOR BAY BRIDGE

Declaring that Alameda wants a bridge across the bay and wants it to be built from San Francisco to Alameda, a party of officials from that city Wednesday pledged themselves to hearty co-operation with San Francisco in any steps which may be necessary to press action in Congress.

City Manager Clifton E. Hickok intimated in a conference that Alameda would be willing to join San Francisco in the formation of a bridge district to speed the project, if such a step should be found advisable.

The Alameda officials accepted without reservation plan No. 1, recommended by the San Francisco committee of bridge engineers, which provides for a span from Rincon Hill to the Alameda mole, after a careful study had convinced them that the plan would interfere in no way with the proposed harbor improvements at Alameda, the naval base project or the municipal airport.

The conference, held in the office of City Attorney John J. O'Toole, was attended by O'Toole, John B. Galloway of the engineers' committee, Supervisors James B. McSheehy and Frank R. Havenner and City Engineer M. M. O'Shaughnessy of San Francisco and Mayor Frank Otis, City Manager Hickok and City Attorney William J. Locke of Alameda.

CHURCH WILL CELEBRATE UNIVERSAL BIBLE SUNDAY

Sunday evening the Daly City Methodist church is to celebrate Universal Bible Sunday. To everyone that attends Sunday evening the pastor will give free of charge a Gospel of St. John. Special musical numbers have been arranged. Dolores Kelm, accompanied by Jeanette Taggart, will play a violin solo. The pastor's subject will be "Is the Bible Old-fashioned?" Please don't forget the Sunday morning service. The pastor will preach on Sunday morning on the subject "The Real Meaning of Service."

The Epworth League is putting on a special program Sunday evening at 7 o'clock in the church auditorium. "A League Adventure in the Clouds" is the title of the playlet they are to present. You folks that enjoy aeroplane rides will enjoy this. Don't miss it.

The Sunday school lacked seven of having 100 last Sunday. Let's try to reach the 100 mark this Sunday. Remember that we have classes for all ages.

Put December 9 down in your memorandum, as the day for the church bazaar. The bazaar will open at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon and continue until 4 o'clock. During these hours the women will serve tea and cake. It will open again at 7, at which time a special program will be given. Everyone will enjoy the program, and will be guaranteed a good time during the evening.

All the ladies of the community are invited to help the women make the bazaar a success by assisting them on Thursday afternoons at the Aid meetings. Everyone is invited.

The Friendly Indians will conduct a paper drive Saturday morning. Please save your old papers for them.

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Pastor.

SHOWER FOR MRS. KOHMANN

A shower was tendered Mrs. Kohmann, of Bellevue avenue, at the home of Mrs. McDonald, 20 Vendome avenue, on Wednesday. A delicious luncheon was served. The table was very artistically decorated. At each place a very pretty cradle motif was placed by the hostess. A basket of beautiful baby roses occupied the center of the table. Those present were Mrs. W. Kohmann, Mrs. M. Murphy, Mrs. Kirchoff, Mrs. Westkamper, Mrs. J. Moran, Mrs. M. Moran, Mrs. S. Griffin, Mrs. W. Roberson and the hostess, Mrs. McDonald. A very enjoyable time was had by all.

IT'S UP TO THE PEOPLE

It has been called to the attention of the Daly City Board of Councilmen that an agent of some detective agency has been canvassing in different parts of the city for subscriptions to pay an additional police officer, and an explanation has been asked as to the Board's policy in the matter.

Detective agencies are governed by state laws and state licenses, and have no connection with the city government. It is entirely optional with the people if they wish to sign up and pay for additional police protection outside of the Daly City police.

CITIZENS ARE GIVEN CHANCE TO HELP IN WHITE PLAGUE WAR

The annual Christmas Seal sale has begun in San Mateo county. Last Saturday seals were placed in the mails, addressed to some 14,000 citizens in San Mateo county, issued from the office of the San Mateo Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis in this county.

In each envelope are seals valued at approximately $4, the envelopes varying, however, from $1 to $10.

Nearly all of the revenue derived from these seals is used in a good cause, the upkeep of the San Mateo county preventorium, located in San Mateo.

At this preventorium, eleven small boys are being aided in their fight against the great white plague.

The quota for San Mateo county is $10,000. Last year the seal sale proceeds fell below this mark. It is hoped by the officials that a much greater response will be made this year.

The first organized seal sale in California was in 1914. Sixteen committees sold seals, raising a total of $12,000. From that start the scene of the work has increased to the point that in 1926 thirty-two counties were engaged in the work, and more than 3,000 invalids were being taken care of.

In this year's appeal San Mateo county executives point out that Christmas seals offer you not an obligation but an opportunity to invest in a constructive and democratic control of tuberculosis.

WOMEN TO CARE FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Caring for crippled children and making the highways safe for humanity will be two of the new humanitarian activities of the organized womanhood of the state, according to the action taken by the executive board of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, in session at Los Angeles.

The women pledged their aid to the curative clinics to be held by orthopedic surgeons in each county under the auspices of the State Board of Health. Crooked children will be made straight by these specialists, and incurable cases will be helped to become self-supporting through subsidized industries and the sale of their products by the club women, it is planned.

Jay walking and jay driving will not be tolerated by the club women, who unanimously endorsed the work of the California Safety Conference.

Women drivers are more careful and more law abiding than drivers of the opposite sex, in the opinion of Mrs. W. W. Green, state president of the federated club women.

SURPRISE PARTY IN HONOR OF SIXTY-SEVENTH BIRTHDAY

On Monday afternoon, November 28, a surprise party was tendered Mrs. S. W. Stone, of 352 San Diego avenue, in honor of her sixty-seventh birthday.

It was surely a genuine surprise, as Mrs. Stone only expected her daughter, but upon answering the ring of the front door bell, she saw many of her friends standing before her. They all came well loaded down with good things to eat. A most enjoyable afternoon was spent, one which will long be remembered by all present.

Those who came to wish Mrs. Stone a happy birthday were: Rev. Lundquist, Mesdames F. Hjelt, J. Mellin, Frank Olson, Pontus Olson, Ludwig Olson, T. Olson, C. V. Olson, J. A. Sandell, Axel Johnson, C. A. Leaf, John Anderson, Blakely, Morrison, Fred Olson, Emma Peterson, Oscar Anderson, John Clyde, Englund, John Johnstone, N. Malstrom, Eckenberg, and L. White.

ST. MAXIMUS PARISH NOTES

The Archconfraternity of Our Lady of Perpetual Help will meet at St. Maximus church next Sunday evening, December 4, at 8 p. m., for their regular monthly meeting. The Reverend Henry Meade, C. S. S. R., will preach the sermon and give the blessing to the sick. All the members are requested to attend.

The St. Maximus Girls' club will hold their regular monthly whist in the Daly City auditorium on Tuesday evening, December 6. Great efforts are being made to make this the largest whist of the year. An unusually large array of inducements are being offered to the players.

Immediately after the game a special orchestra will be on hand for the dance which is a feature of the evening's entertainment.

CARELESS SMOKERS MENACE TO PUBLIC

Careless smokers, by tossing their cigarettes, cigar stubs and matches into dry grass or other highly inflammable material, were responsible for more than 36 per cent of the fires that state rangers were required to stamp out during the forest fire season just ended. State Forester M. B. Pratt so announced in his annual report on fire causes, submitted to Fred G. Stevenot, chief of the State Department of Natural Resources.

While fire losses generally were held in check, "tobacco fires" led all other causes by a big margin, 640 blazes having been traced to this cause, according to Pratt.

Despite the new state law prohibiting the throwing of burning tobacco and other flaming material from moving vehicles on state highways, careless smokers were responsible for 36.3 per cent of the total number of fires this year, as against 27 per cent in 1926.

In their campaign to reduce the number of "tobacco fires," state rangers arrested forty-one smokers and secured thirty-eight convictions, as against twelve convictions last year.

That St. Louis man who has undergone 136 operations will never be at a loss for a topic of conversation, if he has retained his tongue.

A minister says "some day church news will be a big thing in journalism." It is now when the preacher cuts up.

We wonder what brand of cigarettes those champion husband-callers are smoking.

CHRISTMAS FUND WILL BE DIVIDED BY CLUB MEMBERS

Seventy thousand people in California and other states, from babes in arms to pioneers and patriarchs, are to divide a great Christmas fund of some $3,500,000 this year, as a result of their participation in the Bank of Italy Christmas Club. This vast "spending account," a reward for thrift and the saving habit, which is to be distributed to club members in every walk of life, is dedicated primarily to the family purse for toys, and more costly Christmas gifts and will make the financial aspect of the Yuletide observance much brighter in thousands of homes throughout the state, and wherever else its benefits have been taken advantage of.

The building up of this vast Christmas sum calls for the effort of every worker in the big bank, these employees now numbering approximately 4,500. Already the plans for next year's Christmas distribution are under way, at which time it is hoped to distribute between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 to 150,000 holders of the Yuletide passbooks.

Distribution of the fund starts on December 1. Each depositor will be sent a special Christmas Club check covering all of the deposits noted in his club pass book, together with interest. This interest usually amounts to the sum of a single deposit. For instance, if a depositor has applied $20 weekly to the fund, he will receive $1,000, plus $20, representing equal weekly deposits covering the fifty weeks that the plan is in operation, plus $20 interest. Every deposit works the same way.

There is no maximum and no minimum deposit. The lowest total deposit is usually a few dollars, while the highest exceeds $1,000. The average total deposit is $60, meaning that each one of the 70,000 who will receive checks this year will have that average to spend on Christmas tree lights, new electric trains for Billy and Bobbie, new dolls for little sister and other Yuletide investments. The club privilege has been extended to each of the 284 branches in the Bank of Italy system, making it the biggest plan of its kind in the country. The privilege also extends to all colors, creeds, races and ages, and is one of the greatest agencies existing in the country for the spread of the wholesome Christmas spirit and cheer.

Merchants throughout the state publicly announce that they will cash the Christmas club checks readily, and this has greatly stimulated the holiday trade everywhere. Approximately 75 per cent of those who started their Christmas Club accounts a year ago will participate in the distribution of the checks this year, a most pronounced proof of the popularity of the venture.

The Bank of Italy is the pioneer on the coast in this happy, wholesome Christmas Club plan. In the effort to "put it across" all of the employees of the bank are closely organized into teams or squads to make a sharp campaign for club accounts within a certain period. For instance, the period this season is between Friday, November 25, and Saturday, January 14.

The club depositor selects a certain sum that he desires to save. The amount is then budgeted over fifty weekly deposits, the same each week, and the check is mailed after the fiftieth deposit has been made. Managers of industrial and retail establishments participate in the plan to give their employees an extra bonus in the holiday season. Many maintain the club accounts secretly and have the check mailed out to some loved one as a surprise, for the account may be kept in anyone's name. The feature has so many attractive forms that it has a tremendous wide appeal.

The club feature is widely advertised in newspapers and other publications and on billboards and through pamphlets, books and posters. A number of the cities of the state are having the club for the first time this year. Among them are Santa Rosa, Napa, Eureka, Crescent City, Yreka, Chula Vista, El Centro, Marysville, Oroville, Chico, Modesto, Visalia, Santa Ana, San Luis Obispo, Watsonville, Santa Cruz, Salinas, Monterey, Vacaville, Williams, San Rafael, Berkeley and many others.

The main advantage to the bank through the club is the possibility of obtaining new business. Otherwise the club is merely an accommodation to its members to take the sharp edge off the Christmas financing. There are no prizes given to the employees to obtain Christmas accounts. Their reward comes with the increasing of the bank's business and the participation in such increase through the employee compensation plan in which the workers are given 40 per cent of the bank's net income distributed semi-annually.

SUNDOWN

By Wesley Strong

Sundown is the sweetest
Time of day—
Rest after restlessness when Daylight sneaks away!
Age! Oh 'tis the sweetest
Time of Life;
There is understanding,
Love separates strife
From the awakening of Death trailing
With her soothing hand
And quelling the pain of years,
The eyelids misty with tears.
It is then, Oh Age,
In the routine of Living,
The routine from out of birth.
And to the execution—
Softly inevitable trailing,
Without exception or favor waive!

Final:

Oh, by some wooded brook,
Under the care of some soothing
nook,
To lie and dream; Oh that I
Could here lay and stay
Until I die.

ASK GOVERNMENT AID TO DEVELOPE TIDELANDS

Congressman Richard J. Welch of San Francisco will ask the government to take the first steps towards developing the tidelands of San Mateo County into a continuation of San Francisco's port, he declared at the luncheon meeting of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce.

A thorough survey and establishment of pierhead lines along the channel between Hunters Point and Dumbarton Point will be asked of the government by Congressman Welch when congress reconvenes, he assured members of the chamber.

He pointed out that the channel is 2,000 feet wide and in places 45 feet deep, making development worthy of consideration. Welch said he believes this the first step toward asking the State legislature to combine San Francisco and San Mateo counties into a port district.

"There are 30,000 acres of undeveloped tidelands between Hunters Point and Dumbarton Point which should be reclaimed," said Congressman Welch.

LOOKING FOR THINGS

Did you ever stop to think how much time we waste every day looking for things which have been mislaid? We misplace a letter or document and spend half an hour looking for it. Often several minutes are consumed in searching for a hat or pair of spectacles. Some frequently forget where they have parked the car.

This waste of time through lack of care in putting things in their proper places was called to our attention by a very timely article in a newspaper which has just come to our desk. It is such a fine article, so full of good common sense and practical advice, that we shall clip it out for our scrap-book at once.

Now where in the dickens did we put those scissors?

An actress in New York jumped out of a window upon hearing that her divorced husband had remarried. And he had probably jumped from the frying pan into the fire.

The Kings of England, Spain, Italy, Denmark and Egypt are yacht owners.

SIDELIGHTS

From a missionary in the Solomon Islands comes word of the sad plight of the natives, with suggestions for their relief. He writes: "Our small force of brethren are unable to cope with the distress which prevails in this benighted land of cannibals. Many natives are starving. Please send a few more missionaries."

In 1916 Fred Barnes, an English actor, befriended a millionaire of Yonkers, N. Y., during a Zeppelin raid over London. Recently the millionaire died, leaving $425,000 to Barnes in token of his gratitude. Not to be outdone in generosity, Barnes in turn has given $100,000 of his legacy to hospitals of Yonkers.

A pig belonging to Merle Herley of Cedar Rapids, Ia., might be rated as the Lindbergh of the porkers. A bald eagle swooped down on the unsuspecting pig and started to fly away with him, when Herley grabbed a rifle and brought down the bird from a height of about 20 feet. Landing safely on the ground, the pig ran back to his trough and resumed his slop, instead of strutting about like a hero.

M. Angleovitch, a cabinet minister of Jugo-Slavia, experienced a rude shock to his dignity upon his early morning arrival by train at Belgrade. Arousing from sleep he found that thieves had taken all his clothes from an open window in his compartment and he was able to leave the train only after members of the crew had lent him some workmen's apparel.

This is a fish story, but George R. Besser, superintendent of the Denver civic center, says it is true. Three months after he placed 16 goldfish in a small pool for breeding, their number had increased to about 200,000, which required their transfer to a larger lake in one of the city parks.

It looks to us as though Uncle Sam should "divy-up" with Colonel Lindbergh. It is estimated that a million dollars clear profit will accrue to the government from the sale of the new Lindbergh special air mail postage stamps, which will be kept unused by stamp collectors and others as souvenirs.

Rev. Wilson of Seattle has thrown out collection plates and will no longer permit his services to be marred by "money-grubbing." He says that collection-taking suggests putting the church on a charity basis and he wants his congregation to give their support in the more businesslike manner of making regular contributions in definite monthly amounts.

One pint of gin which he did not get a chance to drink has caused Fred Palm of Lansing, Mich., to be given a life sentence. In that state illegal possession of liquor is a felony, and the fourth conviction for a felony automatically carries a sentence of life imprisonment. It was Palm's fourth conviction.

Just how bad conditions are in Germany may be judged from the fact that residents of Berlin had to worry along with 14,788,145 gallons of beer last year.

TRANSCONTINENTAL RUN BY HUMAN DYNAMO

Levette, the "human dynamo," is shown in the illustration working out for his transcontinental run, from Los Angeles to New York. He is a celebrated long-distance runner, and on his long journey will be conveyed by a mammoth truck outfitted for cross-country travel, fully equipped to take care of his needs.

WINTER WEATHER HINTS ON AUTOS

Car Owners Are Warned to Carefully Prepare for Coming Freezes.

Warning was issued to all motorists of this section recently in regard to the preparation for winter weather, by William A. Ochs, head of emergency road service at the Detroit Automobile club. The following precautions are essential for the winter care of a car and for the prevention of emergency breakdowns and trouble, according to Mr. Ochs, whose department last year handled more than 25,000 such calls:

Water connections on the radiator and water pump should be checked for leaks and rotted rubber before anti-freeze solution is used.

Clean the Radiator.

The radiator should be cleaned thoroughly with running water or soda solution before the radiator is filled with the anti-freeze solution, since this solution will loosen up chips of rust and other dirt accumulations and circulate them through the motor. Oil should be changed to the winter weight, according to the particular car and to prevent the freezing of occasional water accumulations at the bottom of the crank case.

Batteries which require rebuilding and charging should be cared for before the cold nights of winter make spare batteries impossible to obtain in an emergency.

The rear end and transmission should be doped with the winter weight of lubricant before freezing weather brings about a stiffening of the oil and damages the gears.

Anti-freeze solutions which have been retained from last winter should be tested with a hydrometer to ascertain their present strength. Summer weather often evaporates them to a useless preventative against freezing weather.

Inspect Tires.

Tires should be inspected for cuts before the frost and ice are allowed to destroy the cords.

Carburetors should be adjusted to a winter mixture where necessary to prevent delayed starting, which runs down the battery. Ignition and coil windings should be examined, since cold weather will bring out any flaw and cause a short as the result of mechanical contraction when the mercury falls.

More than 2,000 emergency road service calls were made by Mr. Ochs' department last year to attend faulty ignition during the early winter months.

Motor Truck Sales in 1927 to Reach 500,000

Five hundred thousand motor trucks for commercial transport will be purchased in the United States in 1927, according to a bulletin of the American Research foundation.

"Because of its greater radius of operation and its ability to handle larger loads," the motor truck is displacing horse-drawn vehicles faster than ever before," says the bulletin. "The ton-mile costs are so much less than the horse is falling in its ability to compete.

"Bankers and financial houses are favorable to the purchase of trucks on the installment plan, as the trucks immediately begin to return revenue.

"The nation's production of gasoline was 42,021,000 barrels of gasoline in 1916, as compared with 299,734,000 barrels in 1926, which, however, is just about in line with the increase in demand due to the expansion of the demand for motors."

Clean Out Old Grease

Front wheel bearings get their lubricant from the hub caps. While the supply of grease in these units may be considered adequate, its condition is a point that merits attention. If the lubricant is silvery in color the fact is an indication that it is filled with dust and filings. In such a case it should be changed without delay, for these substances play havoc with the lubricating qualities of the grease.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Students in the animal science department of the University of California will be ensconced in their new building at Davis by August, 1928, according to plans announced. Bids on the building, which is to cost approximately $300,000, were called for, to be opened November 25. Funds for the building were appropriated last winter by the legislature.

Motorists of California will pay a larger total gas tax than those of any State in the Union, according to government reports of the consumption for the first six months of 1927. These show that a total of $101,250,841 was collected for the first half year the country over. Of this total California stood first with $9,055,934, or approximately 9 per cent of the total.

New building operations at the University of California at Berkeley, involving an expenditure of about $1,850,000, will begin as soon as plans just ordered by the University regents can be drawn by the architects, it was announced last week from the office of President W. W. Campbell. The proposed construction will be the first step in providing the new buildings made possible by last year's $8,000,000 State bond issue.

A marked reduction in California fire losses this year, and especially in damage to timberlands, was reported by Fred G. Stevenot, State Director of natural resources. Total losses during the recent season of fire hazard, Stevenot declared, were $801,892.30 as compared with $978,424.46 last year. The damage to timberlands, he showed, amounted to only $19,275 against timber losses of $146,453 during the 1926 season.

Seventeen California counties fail to enforce the red-light abatement law, according to a year's survey completed by Edward E. Grant, an attorney retained by the State Law Enforcement League, and communicated last week to James A. Johnston, chairman of the State Crime Commission. Sacramento leads the cities in volume of vice, Grant says, and Vallejo leads in "brazenness." The counties marked in red in an accompanying chart are: San Francisco, Siskiyou, Humboldt, Shasta, Lassen, Plumas, Nevada, Colusa, Sonoma, Solano, Sacramento, Amador, Tuolumne, Fresno, Monterey, San Luis Obispo and Kern.

"Send us California flowers please. And, we shall send you Turki flowers." This unusual request has come to this State from a University in Tashkent, which is in Turkestan, an out-lying province of Soviet Russia on the border of the Himalayas. The message has been received here at the botanical division of the California Academy of Science, in charge of Miss Alice Eastwood. Already the exchange of flowers has taken place between California and Turkestan, at the opposite ends of the earth.

Faced with reports that child labor is on the increase in California, the State Department of Education last week launched an investigation of the situation to determine whether provisions of the compulsory school attendance law are being violated. William John Cooper, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, ordered all city, county and district school superintendents to take up the problem immediately with attendance supervisors.

California holders of Irish bond certificates, for which $450,000 was subscribed in 1920 and which are expected to have a redemption value of more than $100,000, are in danger of forfeiting their claims unless they take prompt steps to seek redemption, according to a statement made last week by Daniel E. Doran, who acted as secretary of the San Francisco district of the Irish bond campaign. "Holders of bond certificates must file their claims with the receivers appointed by the New York courts prior to January 15, 1928, in order that they may receive their share of the $2,800,000 which is available for the payment of bond certificate subscribers," said Doran.

Thirty miles of trees will be planted during the next few months to grow to grace the highways of Los Angeles county, if the plans of the forestry department of the county do not miscarry. Snuggled up against the hills in Altadena are about 300,000 trees that gradually will be transplanted in various parts of the county. An ambitious program of reforestation is to be carried out by Chief Forester Turner and Chief Assistant Forester Stanford. Their plan covers, in addition to wayside planting, a better watershed cover. Besides the Altadena nursery, which has a capacity of 500,000 trees, there are other fields which are running to their capacity of about 80,000 this year.

Automobile License buying time comes right along with Christmas shopping time and motorists are being urged to adorn their cars with the new blue and gold 1928 plates at the same time that they are decorating the Christmas tree. The renewal registration period has been advanced to December 15 this year by Frank G. Snook, chief of the State Motor Vehicle Division, to facilitate the tremendous task of issuing new plates to some 1,700,000 California automobile owners in a comparatively brief period.

The State commission to study feasibility of establishing a pension system for State employees held its first meeting at Sacramento last week. W. A. Johnstone, president of the State civil service commission, was elected chairman; J. C. Whitman, secretary of the San Francisco Stock Bond Exchange, vice chairman and Miss Lode-mea Shurtleff, secretary.

Carrying the State's building program along another step toward completion, announcement has just been made by George B. McDougall, State architect, that bids will be invited shortly for attendants' buildings at the Mendocino State Hospital and the Pacific Colony. The new units about to be advertised are budget projects of concrete and frame construction. That at the Mendocino hospital is made possible under a $90,000 budget appropriation and that at the southern institution by a $50,000 allotment.

The California Labor Market Bulletin, for October, 1927, issued by Walter G. Mathewson, chief of the division of labor statistics and law enforcement, shows a decrease in factory employment in October, 1927, compared with October, 1926. The bulletin shows that the same 793 industrial establishments in California, which employed 151,649 workers in October, 1926, employed only 144,936 workers in October, 1927, a decrease of 6,713 employees or 4.4 per cent. The total weekly payroll for the same industrial plants was $4,371,345 in October, 1926, and was $4,127,293 in October, 1927, a decrease of $244,052, or 5.6 per cent.

The conflict between automobile advertisements promising a sustained speed of sixty miles an hour and state vehicle laws limiting cars to thirty or thirty-five miles an hour, will be wiped out by super-highways if plans now in the formative stage in this state are carried out. Two such highways are under contemplation in California at present—one from San Francisco to Los Angeles and the other from San Francisco to the state capital, Sacramento.

Help for the blind of the State is forecast in the conference of several department heads announced last week by Earl E. Jensen, director of institutions. As a result of the request of Governor C. C. Young for a State policy of vocational training and education for the blind to be worked out before the next cabinet meeting. An effort will be made to furnish the blind training in a variety of occupations suited to their individual needs.

California supervisors may fix the bonds of county officers at any time should they fail to do so on or before September 1 as provided by law. Attorney General U. S. Webb has notified Leroy McCormick, district attorney of Tulare county. Webb, in the same opinion, also ruled that the supervisors have no authority to set the amount of bonds filed by deputy county officers, that authority being vested with the appointing power.

Ground-breaking ceremonies marked the starting of construction at Santa Ana last week of the $150,000 Orange county plant of the Weber Baking company to be erected on the site at the junction of Placentia avenue and the State highway adjoining the Orange county fair grounds. The plant, a two story brick structure with ornamental front and covering a space of 85x150 feet, will be built by Hamlin & Young of Anaheim.

The annual Pacific slope dairy show concluded a week of exhibitions and contests at Oakland last week. Miss Emma Handy of Marysville, is the champion milk maid of the State after milking 11.8 pounds of milk in three minutes. Miss Ona Leslie of Torrance won second prize and Miss Ruth Stewart of Santa Rosa, third. Santa Rosa won the junior judging contest in products; Fremont High School of Oakland won second prize and Marysville, third. Santa Rosa also won the milk and butter-judging and the high school agricultural judging. Fremont High School won the cheese judging.

The State Athletic Commission since it first began functioning has collected $403,842 in five per cent taxes from fight promoters throughout the State. Of this sum there still is on deposit with the State treasurer $330,922. The latest financial standing of the commission has just been given out by Walter A. Yarwood, secretary. During the present calendar year the commission has collected $110,777, of which $8,857 was taken in during October. October receipts in 1926 totaled $12,083, and in 1923, $13,667. The total tax for the entire year of 1926 was $146,294, and for 1925, $146,769.

The wooden gold dredger at Trinity Center near Redding is being torn to pieces, the field being given up after ten years active operation. Boulders encountered made it unprofitable to dredge any longer, it was stated. The dredger, 156 feet long and 50 feet wide, was the largest wooden gold boat in the world.

During the past year there have been 1,638 accidents at railroad grade crossings in which more than 800 were injured and 143 killed, according to figures gathered by the public safety committee of the California Highway Development Association. The report calls attention to the fact that at the last legislature, State Senator Roy Pelom introduced and secured the passage of a $10,000,000 bond issue for the reparation of railroad and highway crossings. This measure will come up next year for ratification by the voters.

Eye-Tuned Set to Control Speaker

Expert Describes Radio Development Rectifying Fading Effects.

A method whereby tuning of the radio is done visually rather than by ear, as at present, and which automatically controls the volume of the loud speaker, so that the maximum volume level can never exceed a certain definite value, was described by Harold A. Wheeler of Johns Hopkins university before the Institute of Radio Engineers at New York.

Not only is distortion eliminated, according to the inventor, but also—and, what is very important—distant signals, which fade rather badly, are controlled automatically, so that the maximum volume level can never exceed a definite value.

Fading signals have heretofore been a drawback to the use of sensitive multistage radio-frequency receivers because of the constantly changing levels of loud-speaker volume. The device described before the Institute of Radio Engineers entirely corrects these difficulties.

The name "audiostat" has been selected for this device by reason of its tendency to maintain the audible intensity at a constant value. However, actual control of intensity level is not accomplished within the audio amplifier system, but rather in one or more of the radio-frequency stages.

These results are obtained through the action of the receiver detector or rectifier, which in turn applies a negative biasing voltage in proportion to the strength of the received signals to one or more of the tubes within the radio-frequency stages.

In this way output volume is maintained at a definite standard. Of course, for the case of fading signals, such a device can only control that signal element which is above the required volume level. Where signals fade to a low value or entirely disappear it is apparent that neither the audiostat nor any other available device can correct the deficiency.

In consequence of the automatic control action it becomes difficult to accurately tune by ear a receiving set equipped with the new improvement. The amplification is decreased as the response to the signal is increased by tuning, and vice versa, so that the point of resonance is indicated by minimum plate currents in the neutralized stages of the radio-frequency amplifier. In other words, tuning is simply accomplished by eye instead of ear through a visual indication of a millimeter connected in the plate circuit of the first tube. This arrangement is employed as a resonance indicator and also to give an indication of relative signal intensities.

More Than One Set on Antenna Not So Good

Hooking up more than one set to the same antenna seriously affects reception. This is a fact apparently not generally known, points out a manufacturer's home organ.

"One at a time is the safe rule," warns the bulletin in this matter, relating the incident of a dealer who called up a distributor complaining of the operation of a receiver. Investigation by a service man resulted in finding out that the dealer had some six or eight sets working on the same antenna.

"While only one set was turned on the others were hooked up on the same antenna," continued the bulletin, "which seriously affected reception. This may be a fact not generally known, but more than one set should not be hooked up to the same antenna at the same time. Such a condition may seriously impair the results of a demonstration."

It would be well for fans to keep this information in mind, also, and the bulletin points out that "a series of switches will permit the demonstration of a number of sets on the part of the dealer using the same antenna, but all the sets except the one on demonstration should be disconnected always from the antenna even though they are not turned on."

RADIO TIPS

When troubled with static noises try an indoor antenna. Use a short piece of wire, running it around the room under the rug or carpet or up around the picture molding.

Carbon resistors are most frequently to blame when a hissing noise comes from the loud speaker. The trouble may be traced to a grid leak or to a plate coupling resistor. Sometimes the cause is a corroded contact and most frequently occurs at the positive terminal of the storage battery.

It is necessary to have good tubes to obtain good tone quality in a set. The proper tubes must be employed for the radio frequency, detector and audio functions. Most important of all, a power tube must be employed in the last stage, so as to handle the full volume without apparent forcing. The proper plate voltages and the grid biases, where needed, must be applied on the tubes.

Anything to Oblige

"We don't take transients without baggage." "I am willing to be classed as a permanent guest."

Some of the largest lies have been put over by silence.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to add sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

JINGOISM AND WAR

There is no denying the fact that over-zealous appeals to patriotism are a fruitful cause of war. The spirit which seeks to instill into the youth of any country an undue regard for its own greatness, and a corresponding contempt for the people of other nations, is the greatest menace to world peace.

At a recent conference in St. Louis, Major General Harry T. Allen of the United States Army, who commanded the American forces in Germany after the Armistice, appealed for a more tolerant attitude toward other countries. He declared that the United States should sacrifice some of its nationalism in the cause of peace, "by conferring around a common table in a spirit of compromise with all other sovereign states."

Pride in one's country, love for its institutions, and zeal for its advancement are all laudable qualities. It is also commendable to be ready to defend it against actual aggression which can be met only by force.

But to assume an attitude of superiority and assert it in an offensive manner is unbecoming and unnecessary. If persisted in, such an attitude may easily lead to war.

WHITE COLLAR JOBS

Boys should be taught to think less of fitting themselves for "white collar" jobs, says Prof. F. G. Nichols of Harvard, who points out the greater opportunities for promotion in industry than in clerical pursuits. The young man who starts at the bottom in a factory often soon distances one who begins, say as a bookkeeper. The idea is that while the clerk or bookkeeper may have a white collar job from the very first, the ambitious and intelligent industrial worker has a better chance to rise to an executive position, so that when he does reach the white collar job it means something worth while.

Advice along a similar line is given by President Thatcher of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, who defends vocational schools against the reproach sometimes levied against them by the classical student. He says that the idea is erroneous that vocational schools are undignified because they work with materials near at hand and not with a knowledge of things that are ancient and far off.

Literally, however, the proportion of white collar jobs is constantly increasing. With the continual advent of new machines for doing the "dirty work" of the world, the time may come when everyone may have a "white collar" job.

SUPREMACY OF NEWSPAPERS

Marconi, radio wizard, thus compares the field of radio and newspapers:

"The newspaper has this distinct advantage: It is a record. You can not paste radio announcements in a scrapbook. Newspapers put the news down in black and white.

"Of course, the radio has its advantages. A radio impulse can travel around the world in one-seventh of a second, and news can be transmitted almost simultaneously."

The newspapers can not give the world the splendid musical programs available through the radio; but the press, he feels, will always be the big power in the world for expressing opinion by rulers and statesmen, and for the big events of news.

While the famous inventor does not exactly say it, the press is original and constructive instead of being largely a repeating agency.

The newspaper man who respects and lives up to his privileges has a power above that of kings. Even the radio is under him.

Another paradox is that intelligent persons seldom engage in intelligence tests.

Camberra, the new capital of Australia, will have motor busses exclusively, instead of street cars.

LAST CALL FOR BONUS

More than half a million veterans of the World War have so far failed to apply for their adjusted compensation, popularly known as the "bouns," under the law enacted for their benefit. Unless they apply on or before January 1, their rights will be forfeited.

More than 3,100,000 veterans have already applied for the compensation provided, which is paid in cash where the amount is $50 or less, or by a paid up insurance policy in cases in which the bonus exceeds that amount.

Service officers of American Legion Posts, officials of the Veterans' Bureau, certain representatives of the Red Cross and others will gladly assist ex-service men in preparing and filing their applications, so that no one need forfeit his adjusted compensation through lack of aid in securing it.

The War Department desires that every man entitled to the benefit of the law may receive it, and all who have not filed their applications are urged to do so immediately.

This is the last call.

BURNING UP THE GAS

During the first six months of this year approximately five billion gallons of gasoline were consumed in the United States, and increase of 11.4 per cent over the first six months of 1926. As the peak of consumption each year is not reached until mid-summer, the consumption of gasoline for the full year will no doubt go well above ten billion gallons.

One significant fact regarding the situation is that while the gasoline consumption increased 11.4 per cent, there was an increase of only 7 per cent in the number of automobiles in operation, which indicates that people are using their cars to a greater extent than formerly.

Gasoline taxes collected during the first six months of the year totaled $101,250,841. The gasoline tax is rapidly increasing, both through greater consumption and additional levies being made by the various states. All states now impose a gasoline tax except New York and Massachusetts. The highest tax, 5 cents a gallon, is imposed in Kentucky, Arkansas, New Mexico and South Carolina.

In spite of the tremendous increase in gasoline consumption, there is over production in the oil industry, both of crude oil and gasoline, due to the great new oil fields opened up during the past year. How long this situation will continue is a problem of importance to the public and the oil industry alike. At present there appears to be little danger of a shortage for a long time to come.

YANKEES IN THE SOUTH

What the people of the North and South really thought of each other during the years following the Civil war has been the subject of much discussion. An unusual story in this connection is told by Ed Howe of Kansas in a recent issue of his Monthly:

About the year 1880 the general land agent of the Illinois Central railroad visited Vicksburg for the purpose of putting through a land deal which was considered to be desirable for that city, as well as for the railroad. Naturally he expected to be cordially received.

He was accompanied by his wife and a party of friends in his private car. Strolling about the streets at night they were approached by a man who said he was the chief of police, who declared that he desired to warn them that the people were opposed to their visit and he advised them to go to their hotel and keep out of sight, which they did.

Later the same man called upon the land agent and further advised him to take his party to their car and leave town by the first train. He also suggested that they leave the hotel by the rear, so as not to be observed. Frightened by these warnings, the party did as they were told. On the way out they passed through the dark dining room, where movements of feet added to their fear.

Then the dining room was suddenly lighted up, revealing many ladies and gentlemen of Vicksburg seated at a banquet table. The guests were invited to join in the banquet which had been arranged in their honor.

The warning had been a joke. Southern hospitality had been again vindicated.

THE AMERICAN CREED

"I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established on those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed lives and fortunes.

"I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag; and to defend it against all enemies."—William Tyler Page.

The first complete English dictionary, published in 1747, contained only about 50,000 words, while unabridged dictionaries today have nearly 500,000 words.

DISCARD BILLBOARDS

In response to letters sent out by the General Federation of Women's Clubs and other organizations, 141 of the largest national advertisers have agreed that the use of billboards which deface the landscape should be abandoned. The same view has been expressed by sixteen of the largest advertising agencies.

Advertisers are beginning to realize that billboards which mar the scenic beauty along the nation's highways are a source of annoyance and irritation to tourists and others, which does not make good will for the firms which indulge in their use.

The view of most of the concerns consulted is fairly expressed by the Haines Advertising Agency of Philadelphia, which wrote:

"We have not been able to check any great tangible results from outside billboard advertising. Accordingly we prefer newspapers and can not see why our beautiful landscape should be marred by promiscuous advertising."

Another firm declared that "nobody would suffer very much if all signs and billboard advertisements were abolished, as there are certainly enough other forms of advertising available."

Many large advertisers have voluntarily discontinued billboard advertising during the last four or five years, and it is safe to say that the efforts of the women's organizations in eliminating unsightly outdoor signs will convince many others that they are not only disfiguring to the landscape, but involve a waste of money which might be spent more profitably in other public mediums, particularly the newspapers.

About 60 per cent of American industrial plants are now electrified.

Which said lots and blocks are laid down and delineated upon those three certain maps entitled:

1. "Map of Redwood Park, Subdivision No. 1, San Mateo County, California," filed October 18, 1908, in Liber 6 of Maps at page 66, San Mateo County Records.
2. "Map of Redwood Park, Subdivision No. 2, San Mateo County, California," filed December 7, 1908, in Liber 6 of Maps at page 49, San Mateo County Records.
3. "Map of Redwood Park, Subdivision No. 3 and Resubdivision of Blocks 6, 7 and 14 of Subdivision No. 1, San Mateo County, California," filed December 12, 1908, in Liber 6 of Maps at page 52, San Mateo County Records.

And you are hereby notified that, unless you so appear and answer, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint, to-wit: That it be adjudged that the plaintiff is the owner of said property in fee simple as absolute; that his title to said property be established and quieted; that the Court ascertain and determine all estates, rights, titles, interests and claims in and to said property, and every part thereof, whether the same be legal or equitable, present or future, vested or contingent, and whether the same consists of mortgages or liens of any description; that plaintiff recover his costs hereof and have such other and further relief as may be met in the premises.

WITNESS my hand and the seal of said Court this 16th day of September, A. D. 1927.

(SEAL)
ELIZABETH M. KNEISE, Clerk.
By R. G. Winter, Deputy Clerk.

J. L. Smith, Attorney for Plaintiff.
The first publication of this summons was made in the Daly City Record newspaper on the 11th day of November, 1927.

Many local people plan to attend the dance, "A Night in Hawaii," to be given by the Derby Club of South San Francisco, at Metropolitan Hall, South San Francisco, on Saturday evening, December 3. Paul's Hawaiians of radio fame will provide the dance music.

Felix Buchignani passed away in Sacramento on November 20. He was well known here, having been a Colma resident for many years, but later moved to Sacramento. Surviving him are his loving wife, Ernesta Buchignani, and children, Mrs. Albert Saccani, George Buchignani, Albert Buchignani, Mrs. Fred Russi and Mrs. Thomas Brett. The funeral was held last Wednesday in Holy Cross cemetery.

A number of friends of Miss Margaret Varni and Mr. Al. Kennedy tendered them a surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wall, in the Crocker Tract, last Saturday evening. The affair was given in honor of the approaching marriage of the popular couple. They were presented with a handsome Venetian glass mirror. An enjoyable evening was had by all, and a delicious midnight supper was served. The home was attractively decorated in holly berries and gorgeous poinsettias. A huge bride's cake adorned the table as a centerpiece. Among those present were Misses Tessie O'Connor, Audrey Diamond, Cora Gaspidone, Elsie Fahey, Margaret O'Connor, Margaret Varni, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wall, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tedley, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Fischer, Messrs. Nick Schoplein, Alfred Kennedy, Vincent Jones, A. Schoplein and Dick McCarthy.

"BLOSSOM TIME" COMES TO CURRAN DEC. 4TH

"Blossom Time" will be seen again at the Curran Theatre for a farewell engagement commencing Sunday night December 4. On the occasion of its previous presentations here, "Blossom Time" was unanimously acclaimed the most refreshing oasis that had been found in the theatrical desert during the past generation.

With its romantic history of the life and love of the great composer as a foundation, it possesses the very basic element upon which a play of this character may be written, and with that story embellished and made fascinating by the entralling music of the great composer himself, a combination has been achieved that has proven irresistible.

Nothing more appealing in the way of romance has ever been incorporated in an operetta than the love of the modest Schubert for the sprightly Mitzi, the misunderstanding that leads to the tragedy in the life of the composer through the winning of Mitzi by Shober, and his subsequent calm acceptance of that which Fate has ordained for him.

Musically the piece is rich in melodies of the kind that appeal and linger, and this is easily understood when one considers that practically all the numbers bear the genius of the great composer himself. And with its quaint, colorful settings of the picturesque Vienna of a century ago, and a presenting company that made the fame of "Blossom Time" on Broadway, New York, this now world-famous operetta embraces all the elements that make for a perfect entertainment.

BENEFIT WHIST A SUCCESS

At the final meeting of the special whist and dance benefit committee of South City Aerie, No. 1473, Fraternal Order of Eagles, at which it was reported by Chairman Fred Brocker of this committee that a tidy sum was realized for the family of the brother member for whom the whist and dance was tendered on Tuesday evening, November 1, in Fraternal Hall, South San Francisco, a hearty vote of thanks and appreciation was voted to all merchants, professional men and citizens of South San Francisco, Colma, Daly City and San Bruno for the splendid donations. To the Daly City Aerie for the loan of whist tables; also to the Firemen and Development club of Lomita Park and Father Heverin of San Bruno for the loan of whist tables. To the drill team of San Francisco Aerie for its able assistance. To the South San Francisco Enterprise, the San Mateo Times, the San Bruno Recorder and the Daly City Record for the valuable publicity given, and to the citizens in general of the northern portion of San Mateo county for their hearty co-operation by their attendance.

TO EDITOR'S MEMORY

Through the thoughtfulness of the club women of Alabama, a memorial driveway of exceptional beauty is to be constructed to honor the memory of the late Garrard Harris, formerly editor of the Birmingham News, in recognition of his great service to the cause of conservation.

Mr. Harris was a lover of nature, whose eloquent pleas for the conservation of forests and wild life were most effective in arousing public sentiment in their behalf. His permanent contribution to this cause was his book, "Elements of Conservation," which has been adopted as a text book in several states.

The proposed driveway, bordered with beautiful trees and flowers which he loved so well, will be such a memorial as he would have appreciated most, more fitting than a towering monument of marble to one whose chief delight was to "go forth, under the open sky, to list to nature's teachings."

THEIR FOUR-ROOM BUNGALOW

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

SUE BREEN sought an empty bench and sat down upon it. Though winds which still held the effects of a brilliant mid-afternoon sun, the small park was full of people—children in gowns and perambulators, old, weary and ailing folks who needed an airing, a group of women discussing something with great enthusiasm. Sue glanced at them all indifferently, impressed by the fact that as usual she recognized nobody, then turning her back she stared into a larch tree near her.

The larch tree made her think of home. There had been one at the southeast corner of the old gray house. Her father had planted it. At night she could hear it talking outside her window. It had seemed to tell her wonderful secrets of life and happiness. Then suddenly her father died, the old gray house was sold to pay the debts and she and her mother came to the city, where there was a promise of work for both of them. And now her mother was gone and she was alone. Worse than that, she had lost her job. It wasn't much of a job, but such as it was it sufficed to feed and shelter and clothe her and allow her to lay aside a bit for emergency's sake. She didn't know where to look for another such job. And so as she stared at the friendly larch tree she cried softly, wiping the tears off her cheeks with furtive dabs of her handkerchief. She couldn't have done that, of course, if she had used either powder or rouge. As a matter of fact she left her complexion alone. It was fine, clear, pale, but suited to her gray eyes with their long black lashes and arrowy black brows to her smooth brown hair. Her clothes were just what you would expect a girl of her kind to wear—a plain, dark coat and hat chosen for serviceability and warmth and sensible, low-heeled shoes, sturdy protection from damp sidewalks.

Something passed under the larch tree, whirled along by a chill gust, and landed in her lap. A piece of paper— with marks upon it. She looked down at it, arresting its course by laying her hand upon it. And suddenly she felt a thrill of interest. It was only the back of an old envelope, but it bore a small, well-conceived plan for a bungalow. A four-room bungalow with everything carefully designated save the place for the kitchen sink. But almost anybody except a woman would have left that out.

Sue, brooding over the plan, visualized the bungalow complete, with rose vines on the tiny porch a larch tree maybe to swing over it. A four-room bungalow! It was what she and her mother had always talked of having when their ship came in. Alas, the ship has gone the way of so many other hopes and dreams.

"I beg your pardon!" Sue looked up, startled. A young man stood before her; he was dark, grave, earnest. She, who had worked in a place where there were many men as well as women, knew something about faces. She recognized instantly that this man's face was out of the ordinary in quality of expression. "I beg your pardon," he said again, "but I see the wind brought you a bit of paper that belongs to me."

Sue held out the paper. On the other side of the envelope was written a name in a woman's clear hand. "Mr. Rupert Holley," with the address. Rupert Holley! Why, he was the man Louise Wright was always talking about—her brother's friend. There couldn't be two Rupert Holleys.

"It's all right," she said, "except for one thing."

"What is that?" He was interested. "The kitchen sink. You haven't allowed for it. And it ought to go under the window somewhere. A woman naturally would want light when she washes dishes or cleans vegetables."

"I see. Would you mind showing me?" He sat down beside her with her permission and they settled the matter of the kitchen sink.

It was now time for Sue to go home. She arose. He walked with her as far as the entrance. There they parted. She never expected to see him again.

But she thought of him. He had made a strong impression. It was odd. She did not care for men, was a bit afraid of them, in fact, but he seemed so candid and decent, so trustworthy. She wished she dared ask Louise Wright about him, but upon the one occasion when Louise came to see her his name was not mentioned between them. She, however, had reasoned it all out. The bungalow was for the woman who had written his name on that envelope—a woman's envelope, a woman's handwriting.

"But he would never have known about the kitchen sink but for me," she thought with a sigh.

Two weeks later Sue found another job. It wasn't quite so much of a job as the first, but it would do. Only she would have to change her room in order to be nearer. She hunted her new room painstakingly. It was small, but newly furnished, with a good window and she could get breakfast and dinner, all very reasonable. Besides, she saw that she was going to like Mrs. Moran, her new landlady. And her job wasn't so bad. She got the hang of it immediately.

There really seemed some reason for her being joyful and that first evening she walked into Mrs. Moran's dining room she had a smile to go with her apology for being late. They were all at the table—eight men and women—and as Mrs. Moran introduced the newcomer Sue found herself looking into the eyes of Rupert Holley. More than that her seat at table was beside him.

"How does this happen?" he asked her in a low tone as he passed her the celery. "Is it coincidence or just—fate?"

"Neither," Sue laughed. She was just as happy as that. "It's plain old-fashioned happenstance."

"I've been looking for you everywhere," he said. "At last I asked Miss Wright—and she told me about you, and where to find you. I went over there this afternoon, but you were gone. You see, I won a prize with my bungalow design and half of it belongs to you."

"Why, what are you talking about?" Sue demanded in astonishment.

"I'm saying that half the prize money belongs to you, for without your help about the kitchen sink I would never have won it. It's $100, you know. I had a notion to be an architect before I went into business, but of course, I never had any real training."

So the bungalow wasn't then for any specific person! Well, she was glad of that. But it was absurd to think she would take half of the prize money. And so she insisted during many succeeding interviews. Meanwhile she learned all about him, where he worked, who his people were, some of the things that had happened in his life—intimate details that marked the progress of their friendship.

For they were becoming friends. Sue realized that with increasing joyfulness.

Then one night as they were coming home from the "movies" together, both thoughtful after the tender domestic drama they had witnessed, Rupert suddenly said:

"Sue, I have received a small legacy from an old uncle out in Wyoming whom I was named after. It would build a bungalow—a four-room bungalow like my prize design. If—if you wouldn't share the prize, will you share the bungalow?"

Sue looked up into the kind face bent over her.

"And—can we have a larch tree by the front door?" she asked.

"Two larch trees, dear, and rose vines and at the back a small garden, where I shall raise vegetables which you will prepare at the kitchen sink." Rupert's voice shook with tenderness.

"All right, then," Sue answered. And she clasped both hands about the arm that was to protect her for many years to come.

Shun Women to Insure Good Catch of Seals

For five months of the year the entire male membership, from the weaned infants to the oldest patriarch, of the Eskimo tribe inhabiting Nunivak island off the coast of Alaska, keep bachelor quarters in isolation lodge, during this period. The women cook for them, bringing the food to the lodge, where it is eaten.

According to Henry B. Collins, Jr., Smithsonian ethnologist who has returned from an expedition to Alaska, this separation of the sexes is considered by the Eskimo to be necessary to insure a good catch of seals.

The Nunivak Islanders, numbering 170 souls in all, represent one of the most conservative Eskimo groups left. This is due to their isolation. Though their island measures 70 by 40 miles, it is so barren as to have little attraction for white men. The bureau of education maintains a teacher and his wife on the island, but previous to the arrival of the Smithsonian expedition, they had had no visit from a boat in two years. The only other representative of the outside world is an Eskimo trader at another village 30 miles away.

The lives of the Islanders revolve around the seal, on which they are largely dependent for food, clothing and light. In consequence, the seal is looked upon with the profoundest respect. The five months of isolation from women is concluded with a feast at which the bladders of all seals caught during the year are thrown back into the sea to propitiate the seal tribe.

Numberless taboos regulate the hunting, skinning and general handling of the animal.

So little is known of Nunivak Island, says Mr. Collins, that its shores are not even charted.

Americans Pay Tribute

George Eliot's grave is visited by many American travelers in England. The novelist, who died in 1890, is buried in Highgate cemetery, a fact unknown to most of her own country people. Her grave was overgrown with weeds and left untended for years until recently two women from Baltimore paid to have it resited and planted with flowers. Americans, in fact, are the principal pilgrims to honor the great novelist. Many of them pluck a flower or leaf and carry it in their guidebooks as a souvenir of their visit.

CHRISTMAS WISH

Fairyland was decorated with Christmas holly and red berries of all sorts, and on the tall pine trees were red candles and tinsel.

Everything was really lovely and the fairies, brownies and elves danced in the moonlight over the white snow.

While they were dancing, some more snow fell and it stayed on the great pine trees, making them droop down.

"We want to see the dancing," said the snowflakes.

"And you must dance, too," said the fairies.

So the snowflakes danced with the fairies, and the brownies and the gnomes, while some of the flakes still stayed on the trees, bending them down and whispering to them:

"Bend and sway, that, you know, is the dancing way."

And the trees whispered back:

"It's Christmas time, 'We'll sing in rhyme."

And though no one could have understood the poetry of the trees that night, the fairies did, and it made them very happy.

"But we mustn't have a good time just ourselves," said the Fairy Queen.

"What would you have us do?" asked the little fairies.

"We would love to give others a good time, too."

"We will go around tonight," said the Fairy Queen, "and to every little girl and boy sleeping so soundly we will whisper a secret."

"What will be the secret?" asked the fairies.

"We will tell them that we hope Santa Claus will be good to them, and they will smile in their sleep—for everyone knows of Santa Claus' goodness."

"But our secret will be to tell them that they will be ever and ever so much happier on Christmas Day if they will do something kind and thoughtful for some little children they know who are perhaps poor or sick or unhappy."

"Oh, we'd love to do that," said the fairies. "Shall we get started?"

"Yes right away," said the Fairy Queen, and off they scampered in this direction and that, while the Fairy Queen sent her special band of "whispering fairies" who make wishes come true.

Tam Was Smart

A group of children were discussing the relative intelligence of their pets. Anna May boasted of a canary that pecks lovingly her cheek every time she approaches the cage; Janie said her black pussy could sit up and beg; Jimmy bragged up his bulldog that knows how to shake hands.

Only Betty, the proud possessor of a big white collie, Tam O'Shanter, was silent. After all had been said, she wound up the argument.

"Humph," she ejaculated, "our Tam is so smart that we've had to spell things out in front of him."

After a moment's deep thought, "To keep me wide," said Anne.

AWARD JUDGMENT TO DICK BUTLER

Given $2,500 for His Efforts in English Fight.

An echo of the Tom Gibbons-Jack Bloomfield fight at Wembley stadium, London, in August, 1924, resounded in New York fistic circles the other day, when Dick Butler, well known in pugilistic and political affairs, was awarded a judgment of $2,500 against Eddie Kane, manager of Gibbons and Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion.

Butler claimed the $2,500 as a commission or fee for his efforts in the early negotiations, which resulted in making the match. Judge Harmon Black of the Supreme court agreed with Butler without sending the case to the jury, despite the earnest testimony of Charles Harvey, manager of Tom Heeney, on behalf of Kane.

The Butler judgment adds another unfortunate "break" to the long string suffered by Kane and Gibbons in their invasion of England three years ago. Gibbons was to have received $50,000 for fighting Bloomfield, but according to Kane's testimony, the most he got was $24,000. It was reported at the time of the bout that Gibbons and Kane only received $15,000.

The Gibbons-Bloomfield match fell far below expectations, both as a fight and financial venture. British experts believed that Bloomfield might break the rules of the Beckett school and remain erect rather than horizontal while in the ring. It was thought that Bloomfield could sleep in a bed which had not been sprinkled with resin dust to make him feel at ease.

In his training camp he passed the test of hearing the clang of doorbells and alarm clocks without crashing instinctively to a horizontal posture. In the first two rounds against Gibbons, Bloomfield remained perpendicular, but this was largely because Gibbons managed to keep his itching gloves from Bloomfield's chin.

At the opening of the third round Gibbons signaled friends at the ringside that it was time to go home. Then he smacked Bloomfield on the chin and another British heavyweight was in his natural position of repose, his shoulder blades on his canvas mattress.

Sir Thomas Lipton Taken for Steward

The yachting cap affected by Sir Thomas Lipton proved a money maker for the multimillionaire while en route to the United States aboard the Leviathan.

A woman passenger, presumably nearsighted, called Sir Thomas to her deck chair.

"Steward," she said, "will you please bring me a rug?"

Without comment Sir Thomas found the desired blanket and brought it to the woman.

"Thank you," and she tipped him 50 cents.

Sir Thomas bowed low and walked away. He kept the half dollar.

"Foolproof" Timepiece for Football Officials

The "foolproof" timepiece, constructed for use by football officials and adopted recently at Western conference games, has gained a foothold in the East. For the first time, the new watch was introduced at a Harvard contest when Horween's eleven met Indiana. J. J. Lipp, the designer, was one of the officials at the game.

The timer consists of two separate mechanisms, one for registering the time of play and the other for recording time out. The watch has a 75-minute dial, representing the four 15-minute periods and the 15-minute intermission between halves.

In addition, notations appear on the dial to remind officials of their duties under the rules at specific intervals. There is a lug control for starting and stopping each movement, the snap back to zero is by a stem press with a safe locking device which prevents losing the time even if the watch is dropped or hit by the ball.

ASPIRIN

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Bayer Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If it says Bayer, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it is not! Headaches are dispelled by Bayer Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Bayer—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

STORY FROM THE START

Handsome, fastidious and wealthy—young St. Croix Creighton awaits his sweetheart at their trysting place. She is fifteen minutes late. This ordinary little Pennsylvania Dutch girl, Meely Schwenckton, but he awaits her eagerly. She is so demurely beautiful, he thinks, but so out of his "class." Despite her seeming innocence and ignorance, she succeeds in keeping him at a distance, to his chagrin.

CHAPTER II

Meely Schwenckton, hurrying back breathlessly through the October twilight to the farm house, lest the autocratic head of the house get in from the fields ahead of her and become suspicious of her goings-on, seemed to have undergone a transformation since she had left her lover. Not only had she managed, on the way home, to shed her cheap, gaudy frock of blue voile for a trim tailored suit, but also that veil of bovine dullness which her pretty face had worn had been replaced by a soft, bright amusement; her timid bearing, so abjectly expressing a sense of inferiority, was changed to a look of suppressed excitement, an air of intense vitality, which made her recent humility unimagined.

Reaching the kitchen porch of the farm house, she was brought up short as her hand touched the latch of the door, by the sound of a whining nasal voice within, reproaching and threatening, to the accompaniment of a child's crying.

Meely's hand dropped from the latch and she stood listening, a look in her eyes of mingled distress and disgust.

"When your Pop hears how you done me dirt this after," whined the nasal voice, "oh, but you'll get the good whippin', Lizzie Schwenckton! Once I tell him how you run out after school and let me with all the work, meebly you won't ketch it with that there switch he keeps handy! Lettin' me alone here with all the diapers and all the cleanin' and cookin' and his sick wife and baby to tend! Well!—of!—all!—things! Yes, if he don't give you the worst switchin' you ever had, then I don't know the man!"

"Ach, Aunt Rosy, don't tell him!" the child's voice begged in gasping sobs. "I'll help you now—I'll do this here whole tub full of washin'—and I'll wash all the supper dishes for you—you can just set and rest yourself—"

"Well, I guess anyhow you'll wash the supper dishes after the smart switchin' you're gettin'! That'll make you spry for a couple days, I guess, if my talkin' at you don't! You needn't to beg me—"

The nasal whine stopped short as the speaker became aware of a third person in the room, though she had not heard the opening of the door. There stood Meely, her back against the kitchen door, looking at Aunt Rosy with those bright, clear eyes of hers that somehow always cowed the woman, giving her, unreasonably, a sense of guilt which she resented. Always she was resolving that she would not let herself be "downed" by this "high-minded hussy" who had no rights in this house anyway.

"I'll show her who's got rights here!" she daily determined.

Yet she found herself just now, as always when confronted by the silent criticism of this girl's confusing regard, trying apologetically to justify herself.

"Mind you what Lizzie done yet! I give her the diapers to wash after school and she run out to play and let 'em. And me with all the cleanin' and the supper to get and my sick sister's broth to make and all—my lands! How kin I get through all when Lizzie runs out after school and won't help?"

The big, warm, cozy kitchen which, like most farm kitchens of Pennsylvania, was also the family living room, was covered by a bright rag carpet and furnished with a roomy settee against the wall, several big, gayly painted rocking-chairs, a large decorated calendar labeled "Sweet Smiles" hanging from a cuckoo clock, a table spread for supper, a cooking stove on which sausage and potatoes were sizzling.

The Schwenckton family, as well as all the neighboring farm families, had seen this kitchen become transformed in three weeks, under the temporary reign of Aunt Rosy during the confinement of Schwenckton's young wife, from a spotless cleanliness to a messy untidiness and disorder which, in the eyes of the immaculate Pennsylvania Dutch housekeepers, was a scandal next only to immorality and more unheard of. Aunt Rosy's incompetent housekeeping, combined with her autocratic and unamiable attitude towards her sister's stepchildren (from which there was no escape nor appeal, since it was backed up by the head of the House) had driven the elder son and daughter to rebel and run away; Nettie, the fifteen-year-old girl, having found refuge in the home of her grandmother and Jakey, seventeen years old, having disappeared entirely—to the genuine distress as well as inconvenience of their father to whom Jakey especially had been a great help on the farm. But the other two, Lizzie and Sammy, were too young to escape.

The one soft spot about Aunt Rosy, apparently, was her devotion to her young sister, Susie. Mr. Schwenckton's girl wife, whom she had "raised" from a baby. But although she idolized Susie, she completely dominated her. In all things Susie followed her elder sister's advice and judgment and obeyed her, when she was with her, as much now as when, before her marriage, she had lived in Rosy's home. Susie was the only person in the world who did not find Rosy repulsive.

Ten-year-old Lizzie, a thin, delicate-looking child, was working frantically at a wash-tub at the far end of the cluttered, dirty kitchen, crying hysterically while she worked, terrified of the punishment hanging over her.

Meely, going across the room to hang her jacket on a rack on the wall, spoke over her shoulder in reply to Aunt Rosy's complaints, her pleasant tone and manner betraying none of the loathing she felt towards the woman. "But since you didn't do the cleaning, Aunt Rosy (look at this kitchen!) nor the diapers, and kept Sammy home from school to wait on Susie, what have you done all day? And Mr. Schwenckton won't like it, you know, that you're having the diapers washed here in the kitchen where we have to eat—"

It is to be noted that Meely's accent and diction were not now so studiously Pennsylvania Dutch as when she had talked with St. Croix Creighton a half hour ago. The hint of foreignness in her speech was not that of the Pennsylvania Dutch at all.

A heavy step on the porch at this instant was followed by the opening of the kitchen door and the entrance of the farmer in overalls.

Lizzie's crying was instantly choked back while she bent to her work more frantically than ever; and Aunt Rosy acquired suddenly a great air of industry about the stove and table.

Mr. Schwenckton, closing the door behind him, stood surveying with disgust the disorder and dirt of the kitchen.

A big, red-faced man of mild, though obstinate, countenance, he looked so good-natured that one might have wondered why his children were so afraid of him. But family discipline among the Pennsylvania Dutch is a religion; "spare the rod and spoil the child," a dogma. Mr. Schwenckton had ever tried to perform his whole duty by the children God had given him to rear for His honor and glory in a heavenly home, the Scriptural prescription for accomplishing this being the only means he knew, disagreeable as he often found it—for he was withal an affectionate father; not naturally severe; only very conscientious; obstinate in the performance of what he saw to be his duty, however difficult.

"Yi, yi, yi!" he shook his head and frowned at the dirty kitchen, "bat you're the doppel of a housekeeper, Aunt Rosy! You ain't the nice housekeeper your little sister Susie is. Well, I guess anyhow not! Yi, yi, yi, if the neighbors seen our kitchen so through-outter yet!"

"Yes, well, but when I tell you once how Lizzie won't help along when I tell her to," his sister-in-law complained as she began to dish up sausage and fried potatoes, while Mr. Schwenckton went to the sink to wash his hands, "you'll see for yourself, Mister, how I can't get through all by myself. Lizzie she run—"

"Lizzie!" the farmer broke in, raising his voice above the running water, "stop that splashin' at the tub and come now to your supper."

"Ye-yes, sir," the child stammered, her teeth almost chattering. As she dried her hands on her apron and came to the table, Aunt Rosy gave her a look as who should say, "You just wait! Don't think because he cut me short that I ain't tellin' on you! You just wait!"

"Where's Sammy?" asked Mr. Schwenckton.

"Upstairs settin'," his sister-in-law told him as she carried the food from the stove to the table. "With Susie. Susie she's too poorly to be let alone, while I gotta be down here."

Mr. Schwenckton shook his head dolefully, his face, as it emerged from the roller-towel, looking deeply troubled.

"Well, come everybody now and set. I want to get eat and hurry up to Susie."

During the long "blessing" invoked by the head of the house, after they were all seated, Meely's was the only head unbowed. The expression of her face (while fulsome words of gratitude were directed to the throne of God) suggested anything but thankfulness as she surveyed the platter of sausage floating in a lake of grease, the burnt potatoes, the pale, heavy pie.

At the "Amen" she rose at once, went to a cupboard and brought back to the table a fresh napkin for herself.

The temporary housekeeper spoke up in self-defense against the implied criticism of this gesture on Meely's part. "Well, if I did forget your napkin again, I must say I wasn't raised to eat so hogghish myself that I need a napkin to my meals!"

"You've got no need, Aunt Rosy," her brother-in-law mildly admonished her, "to speak so unpolite. Us we all know," he added as they all began to help themselves, each one for himself, as was their custom, "that Meely was raised more refined than us."

"Well, I wouldn't go so far as to say that, Mister," Aunt Rosy resolutely objected. "To call myself common yet toward what she is! I ain't belittlin' myself that much! I certainly consider myself as good as other ones; and so I likewise consider your poor, sweet, little wife, Sam Schwenckton! If she'd heerd you'd compared her to this here stranger and said she was common toward what this here stranger is—"

"Ach, Aunt Rosy, be peaceable," Mr. Schwenckton checked this whining tirade. "Meely ain't exactly a stranger to us, even if we didn't get acquainted with her till here this fall. You can't call a cousin a stranger yet!"

"You ain't got no proof she's your cousin. She don't look like as if she's your cousin. Nor act or speak like none of your cousins I ever met up with."

"Yes, well, you never met up with none of the Berks County Schwencktons. They're different, too, again from us Schwencktons here in Dauphin county. They're better educated that way and more refined. Meely," he addressed their boarder, his tone anxious, his eyes worried, "how do you think my Susie is today?"

"She can't get better so long as you keep her room dark and don't air it, Mr. Schwenckton. Air and light are all she needs to get well."

"Yes, well, but I don't hold with them doctors that says it's unsanitary to keep the windows shut and the room dark when you're sick," Mr. Schwenckton pronounced conclusively—and from a conclusion once reached, a position once taken, the power did not exist that could move Sam Schwenckton.

He drew a deep sigh. "I did hope Susie was gettin' better for me after her lookin' so bright yesterday."

"The reason she was so much brighter and better yesterday," said Meely, "was because when Aunt Rosy was taking a nap, I covered Susie and the baby with blankets and aired the room! Threw open all the doors and windows and left them open for an hour! Then I washed Susie and changed her nightgown and the bed linen. She and the baby slept after that for four hours! That's why she was better yesterday."

Cheapside First Home of Great British Bank

How came the bank of England to be built? And why the appellation "The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street?" Mr. H. Rookby Steele, a well-known London architect, supplies the answers in an article on the architectural history of Britain's bullion house. Many think that Sir John Soane, the wizard of Lincoln's Inn-fields, built the bank. His are the girding walls, but in the raising of the fabric three other names—those of Sampson, Taylor and Cockerell—have to be joined. Mercer's hall, Cheapside, was the bank's first home; but a quick move was made to the Grocer's hall, in Poultry, and it was not until 1752 that the foundation stone of the present bank was laid. George Sampson was the first architect, and it is curious that no building, other than the bank, can be attributed to his hand, a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer comments. In the cornice extending the full length of the building, Taylor sculptured an excellent figure of Britannia, some years after the completion of the building. "This carving, the 'trade mark' of the bank," writes Mr. Steele, "was probably the inspiration for that trite appellation, the 'Old Lady of Threadneedle Street.'" Taylor added to Sampson's building, and in 1870 the Gordon riots led the directors to fear that the adjoining church of St. Christopher-le-Stocks might lend itself as a dangerous vantage point for a mob, so powers were obtained, the fabric was pulled down, and more extensions were made.

No man's good intentions ever boosted him into the hero class.

Coats of Fur in Fashion Picture

Peltry Used in Unique Ways to Gain Chic Effects—Winsome Colors.

Coats of fur are no longer a distinction, for almost every woman who has a comfortable allowance for her wardrobe has one. Styles in this whole department of dress come and go with the whims and fancies in others, and swing back and forth between as wide extremes as they do in silhouette, design and detail.

In the new era of wealth fortunes are invested in splendid sable, ermine, mink and other wraps, which are worn by women of fashion for every occasion except that of active sports. It is no longer enough that a fur coat be just a coat, declares a fashion writer in the New York Times. It is expected to be as distinctive as a gown, and even more is demanded of it because of the cost. And from whatever part of the globe the pelts come, it is in Paris that they are worked up into the smartest, most artistic creations. All the French couturiers include furs and fur-trimmed wraps in their collections, and "Max"—otherwise Mme. LeRoy—is a recognized authority in their design.

In her atelier on one of the fashionable boulevards she has set a stage as a background, an interior in pearl gray, against which are displayed her new compositions. Some of these this year were most unusual, reflecting the season's styles in diagonal lines, complex mosaics and striking combinations. The coats made all of fur are particularly interesting because in these the designer avoids the obvious and handles fur with as much apparent nonchalance as if it were an ordinary dress fabric. Priceless pelts are put together like tiles or little mosaic patterns, making the silhouette of a coat or wrap as important as that of the gown. The number of tiny strips of fur sewn together to form one of these artistic creations represents in itself an achievement, and the finished article is worth a king's ransom.

Zebra Stripes in Fashion.

The sensation of the fur season presented by LeRoy is the zebra coat. This is a kid pelt dyed to represent a zebra, and a few coats are made of the genuine skin. The sharply lined black and white make, of course, a very flashy garment, one also not easily classified, since it may be worn for a great variety of occasions, from sports to evening wear. This novelty is finding a warm welcome among the younger set. Another strikingly new coat is made of a soft fur dyed in a rich shade of orange-beige with a deep shawl collar of brown fox. The shawl collar, wider and deeper than ever before, is Mme. LeRoy's own particular contribution to the season's mode. A successful example of this is shown in an evening wrap of rare beauty. It is a wrap-around dolman coat of ermine, quite simple in line, showing the fine quality of the fur. The coat sleeves, which are straight and wide at the hand, are finished with a cuff of the same ermine applied with the lines of the fur running across the sleeve. There is also a very deep shawl collar, again of the same ermine. Another ermine wrap delightful in feeling and color is dyed a shade known as honey-beige. In it the skins are joined in narrow strips. The sleeves are plain, with no cuffs, and the voluminous shawl collar is made of fox dyed in the same shade as the coat. A shawl collar of this kind is used on far the greater number of wraps and is especially good on the wrap-around coat model. Usually it is made of a fur contrasting with that of the coat, but some of the handsomest wraps shown by the house of Max and others have coat, collar and cuffs all of one fur.

New Furs Offered.

Offerings of new furs are so varied that any of several may be accepted as correct in mode. The last word in elegance and luxury is an evening wrap of white ermine with a front-band trimming, a wide and deep shawl collar and cuffs of Russian sable. In contrast to this is an all-day coat of leopard skin, on which is a kneedeep band, a round collar and wide cuffs of fitch. In between these extreme types are many others, new and smart, designed to suit the requirements and style of women of widely different tastes. Among them are the daytime wraps in fur. One that is the epitome of dignity and smartness is made of broadtail of a fine quality, which is almost as supple as velvet. A new detail in this design is the sleeve, which is wide, but is drawn in to a narrow wristband and left untrimmed. The collar is a stunning affair of genuine sable made in the popular shawl model, and extends down one side to the bottom of the coat. This is one of the best models. In it is illustrated the lavish use of sable

Mink Collars and Cuffs Finish Wrap of Shorn Lamb.

In which fortunes are apparently being invested.

Another of the luxury furs is Eastern mink. This, too, is used in a particularly skillful manner in the models from Max. The lines are seldom straight from collar to hem, but are fitted in diagonal sections in panels, borders and rippling borders. One of the most conspicuous creations in fur is by Mme. LeRoy in an entirely different style from those of the prevailing mode. It is a decidedly feminine model—a long cape of especially selected mink skins. They are put together to form lines that resemble tucks in curves, dipping at the back and sweeping upward toward the opening in front. Toward the bottom the cape flares and is finished in a wide scalloped edge, which is much longer at the back. An amusing and cleverly done novelty is an enormous bow of the mink with crosswise bands of the fur.

A cape of different pattern, which is especially designed to be worn over an evening gown without crushing it, is made by joining ermine in long, narrow strips in such a way that they form diagonal lines as the wrap is drawn scarf-fashion over one shoulder. A long collar is made of natural marten.

Sports Fur Coats.

Fur coats named "sports" are uncommonly interesting this season. They lack the bizarre tone of past years and are much finer, both in quality and type, and serviceable for many different occasions. Many "new" furs are presented—being the hides of the same familiar animals given novel names. Madeleine Vionnet uses a sheared goat skin dyed a golden beige. Its wide, flaring cuffs and a diagonal collar, tapering to the waist, are of goat hide that is unshorn. One hears and sees a great deal about shaved lamb, which is extremely popular for sports and daytime coats in youthful models.

To the possessors of Hudson seal coats comes the assurance that Hudson seal is to be brought back into vogue as a relief from the flood of fancy furs with which we have been deluged. Henri Vergne of Paris puts collars and cuffs of the flat brown striped furs on his Hudson seal coats, just as does Grunwaldt, who further elaborates a black coat with a ladder design of mink tails running from collar to hem on the center back.

In spite of the great variety of novelty furs introduced the last few seasons one saw at the fashionable Paris gathering places last winter principally coats of mink. According to the French furriers, this is due to the innate sense of thrift of the Frenchwomen, who demand that fur coats must wear indefinitely, and is not to be taken as a guide for America, where such a fragile but attractive fur as shaved lamb, American broadtail, obtains the vogue that its beauty warrants. Either in gray or beige, with self-collar or matching fox, this fur makes many of the season's most charming coats. One of these, a straight coat in light beige broadtail, had the shawl collar and all edges bordered with an inch-and-a-half band of the same skin in brown. This same brown encircled the single deep patch pocket on the right side and also made a large flower for the lapel.
